

The Nigerian Census Drama!

Why can't we count?

Lagos had a census in 1866 by the British colonial government. Ever since, the country has witnessed 8 national counts.

Questioning the readiness of the National Population Commission (NPC), the Buhari-led administration announced another postponement of the census planned for May 2023. The incoming administration will determine the new dates.

Breaking the cycle of previous census failures requires a proactive approach. By prioritizing robust preparations, fostering transparency, and rebuilding citizen trust, we can lay a successful foundation for the upcoming census, ensuring accurate and comprehensive data for better decision-making and a stronger future for all.
